Behind the Scenes Of Plank

Plank is receiving some very nice press. The designers and actors who have worked hard and used their incredible talents to put together the show that you see at the Calderwood Pavilion most definitely deserve their names noted. There are always a couple of people, though, who work tirelessly and without whom the show would never go on, but are never noted in the theater reviews because their work is very much behind the scenes. Read about two of them here, and also about how the movement in Plank was devised.

The movement you see in Plank is a result of a devised theater process where the entire ensemble worked collaboratively with the director to build the choreography.

Please support Alley Cat Theater. If you are excited by you've been reading and would like to play a role in keeping Alley Cat Theater afloat (pun intended) and its mission of producing new work and telling stories by pushing the boundaries of the theater, consider contributing to Alley Cat Theater. Your patronage--no matter how big or small--is appreciated. Don't think that if you can't give five hundreds dollars it's not worth it. A small amount—even five or ten dollars—would be most welcome. With your support, you will be playing an important role in keeping intelligent, compelling, and thoughtful small theater alive in Boston.

Alley Cat Theater is a sponsored project of Fractured Atlas, a non-profit arts service organization. Contributions for the charitable purposes of Alley Cat Theater are tax-deductible to the extent permitted by law.
